New Medical Thriller trilogy ends with ‘Volume 3: Clinical Justice’

Don W. Hill, M.D., tells the tale of a medical student turned vigilante in ‘The DNR Trilogy’

CASA GRANDE, Ariz. (PRWEB) November 20, 2018 -- Don W. Hill, M.D., returns to the publishing scene with the release of “The DNR Trilogy: Volume 3: Clinical Justice” (published by Archway Publishing). The novel follows the concluding story of a dispirited medical student turned vigilante as his life comes full circle.

Now engrossed in the brutal and dehumanizing clinical clerkship rotations, J. D. Brewster spirals downward into an ever-deepening quagmire of moral despair. After successfully recruiting several other grievously traumatized victims of violent crimes, he successfully orchestrates a shocking act of vigilante retribution within the very halls of an institution that was auspiciously dedicated to the art of medical care. However, Brewster’s life is about to change as he must eventually face the truth.

“The DNR Trilogy: Volume 3: Clinical Justice” weaves together many genres, including historical fiction, medical drama, crime and punishment, meanwhile challenging readers to “probe into the roots of evil that all too often embroil the human condition.”

“This novel will provide a fascinating glimpse into the dark underbelly of the medical profession and the often brutal medical school experience that one might have encountered in the later half of the 20th century,” Hill shares. “Hopefully, it will appeal to anyone looking for intrigue, mystery, and a compelling read, as certainly the more unsavory elements of our society may have much more to worry about from the underground ‘clinical justice’ system than from our own official criminal justice system.”

About the Author
A native of Houston, Don W. Hill, M.D., FACP, graduated from Trinity University in San Antonio, Texas, in 1978. After completing his medical school training at the University of Texas Medical School at Houston in 1982, he completed his postgraduate training in internal medicine, hematology and oncology at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque in 1987. At the time that he composed this novel, Hill had completed 30 years of medical practice that included working in multispecialty clinics, solo practice and everything in between, including academia and clinical research. As a fellow of the American College of Physicians, he is a published scholar but “The DNR Trilogy” is his first attempt at a work of fiction. Although approaching the end of his medical career, Hill completed the trilogy while working in Hawaii before returning to the mainland. A self-described “angry man safely nestled behind a superficial, amiable facade of banality,” Hill felt compelled to write this novel to make peace with God, the universe and the practice of medicine.
