Drs. Steven White and Brad Haines Treat Gum Disease in Mooresville, NC with Precise Laser Dentistry

Skilled dentists who continually strive to improve the overall experience for patients, Dr. Steven White and Dr. Brad Haines, welcome new and existing patients with gingivitis to discover an effective laser treatment for gum disease in Mooresville, NC.

MOORESVILLE, N.C. (PRWEB) November 20, 2018 -- Dr. Steven White and Dr. Brad Haines invite new and existing patients to schedule a treatment consultation for gingivitis at their office in Cornelius, NC. This common infection, left untreated, can be destructive to oral and overall health. With a combined experience of 40 years in practice, along with special training and certification in laser dentistry, Drs. White and Haines are uniquely qualified to diagnose and treat all stages of gum disease in Mooresville, NC.

Periodontal disease is an infection of the gingival tissue by bacteria that occur naturally in the mouth. The initial symptoms of gingivitis are easy to spot, consisting of red, swollen, and bleeding gums. Additional signs will appear as the infection progresses and may include bad breath, tooth sensitivity, wide periodontal pockets, gum recession, loose teeth, or bone loss.

Drs. White and Haines offer treatment for every stage of gum disease: gingivitis, periodontitis, and advanced periodontitis. As the infection progresses through these stages, appropriate therapies may vary from a deep cleaning to gum surgery. Laser-assisted gum therapy, using an Odyssey diode dental laser, is often recommended as a convenient alternative to traditional gum surgery.

Patients who opt for laser gum surgery can look forward to healthier gums with greater comfort and convenience. Laser treatment of gum disease eliminates the need for scalpels and sutures, reduces recovery time, and can encourage the regeneration of bone tissue.
