Texas Alliance of Energy Producers Opens Membership to All Energy Entities

Historic change expands membership to any energy associated company and professional in Texas

AUSTIN, Texas (PRWEB) November 21, 2018 -- With a historic resolution approved by its board of directors, the Texas Alliance of Energy Producers (the Alliance) has expanded membership opportunities to any individual or company involved in the oil and gas industry or related industries. New members will benefit from the Alliance’s influence in continuing to make Texas the greatest environment to produce energy in the world.

“The Texas Alliance of Energy Producers exists to serve the independent oil and gas industry in our great state through advocacy, education and outreach. We are hereby committing our Association to represent the entire oil and gas industry that has brought so much prosperity, security and freedom to America,” the resolution stated.

Originally founded in 1930, the Texas Alliance of Energy Producers is one of the largest statewide oil and gas association in the nation, providing a voice at the local, state, and federal levels for sound U.S. energy policy for more than 2,600 members. All energy related organizations and professionals can benefit from the Alliance’s help in solving issues and improving their bottom lines via regulatory and technical assistance, insurance, educational events, networking opportunities, and more.

“This is an exceptional opportunity to work with the entire oil and gas industry, from drilling rigs and pumpjacks to energy service companies, marketers, geologists and engineers, landmen, investors, bankers, lawyers and all professionals who work to produce oil and gas in Texas,” said John Tintera, president of the Texas Alliance of Energy Producers. “This big tent approach now gives us an unprecedented ability to represent all types of energy production professionals. At today’s Alliance, no issue is too big and no membership is too small.
