Illustrated Children's Book Follows the Adventures of a Young Bird who was Afraid to Fly

Tina Grissom introduces young readers to 'Birdee’

There once was a grove of pine trees standing tall in the center of a small park in the city. In one of these pine trees was a nest — a home to a little sparrow named Birdee. He lived there with his mother, brother and sister. One day, mother bird decided to teach them how to fly. One by one, the little birds sat on the edge of the nest, flapped their wings and took to the air. Birdee, the smallest, struggled and promptly fell to the ground. As he looked, he realized how high up they were and was afraid to fly. Will he ever soar to the sky?

An excerpt from the book reads:
“Be careful, don’t fall!” chirped Birdee to the pigeons. But all they did was stare at him with their beady eyes and stayed right where they were. And Birdee was afraid.

Presented in colorful illustrations, the book takes readers on an adventure as Birdee travels around the city. In the end, the story aims to show children not to be afraid of trying new things. “I want kids to enjoy this book so much that they will want to read it again and again!” Grissom adds.

“Birdee!”
By Tina Grissom
Softcover | 8.5 x 11 in | 44 pages | ISBN 9781546222552
E-Book | 44 pages | ISBN 9781546222545
Available at Amazon and Barnes & Noble

About the Author
Tina Grissom lives in Southern California. She enjoys playing with her three rescue dogs and listening to birds singing in the backyard.
Contact Information
Marketing Services
AuthorHouse
http://www.authorhouse.com
888-519-5121

Online Web 2.0 Version
You can read the online version of this press release here.