LANCASTER, Pa. (PRWEB) November 21, 2018 -- McMahon Winters Soto-Ortiz, LLC is pleased to announce that Shawnee S. Soto-Ortiz and Julia M. Parrish have been featured in articles in Susquehanna Style and Fine Living Lancaster, respectively. This month’s Susquehanna Style Empowerment Issue features the firm’s partner, Shawnee Soto-Ortiz, in its section entitled “Women in Business – Women of Grit, Willpower, and Determination.” In addition, the firm’s associate, Julia Parrish, is featured in the November issue of Fine Living Lancaster in the article entitled “Making Connections in Business and Networking Groups.”

Shawnee S. Soto-Ortiz, Attorney and Partner, is a native of Lancaster County. In 2005, she graduated from the New England School of Law in Boston and began serving in that region as a Family Law Attorney. In 2010, she returned home to Lancaster County with her family, and in 2015 joined McMahon Winters Soto-Ortiz, LLC where she specializes in Family Law, focusing on custody and divorce. She is honored to be featured in Susquehanna Style, which offers the very best of the region with dynamic, socially relevant content reaching an audience of more than 80,000.

Julia M. Parrish, Attorney and Associate, is a native of York County. In 2005, she graduated with her law degree from Penn State – Dickinson School of Law. She began her career working in York County and later joined McMahon Winters Soto-Ortiz, LLC, where she focuses on civil matters and family practice law. Honored to be featured in Fine Living Lancaster, Julia was able to offer tips on making positive community connections.

“Julia and I are both so proud to be featured in Susquehanna Style and Fine Living Lancaster. Both publications really highlight the amazing community that we serve in the greater Lancaster area,” said Shawnee Soto-Ortiz, Attorney and Partner, McMahon Winters Soto-Ortiz, LLC.
