PHOENIX (PRWEB) January 03, 2019 -- When it comes to New Year’s Resolutions, there is some bad news and some good news. The bad news is that only about 8 percent of people who make New Year’s Resolutions ultimately end up keeping them. But the good news is that GiangisKitchen.com has put together a list of worthy New Year’s Resolutions for 2019 that any domestic gourmet can easily keep — regardless of whether they are brand new to the world of culinary arts, or if they are a veteran chef.

The list of suggested resolutions is available on the award-winning GiangisKitchen.com blog at https://www.giangiskitchen.com/new-year-resolutions, and include:

- At least a few times in 2019, think outside the recipe box and try something completely new and different. People who prefer to take it slow and easy can try creating snacks, before they dive into a full meal for their family.

- Throughout 2019, try to spend more time cooking together as a family. This does not mean being in the same general area. It means everyone rolling up their sleeves and making a contribution, such as preparing ingredients, mixing sauces, setting the table and so on.

- Sometime during the year ahead, go ahead and purchase a coveted piece of cooking equipment, such as a pressure cooker, food processor, melting drome, cookie press, and so on. It will open up a new world of recipe possibilities, and make cooking even more fun and creative.

In addition to suggesting these fun and feasible pledges for the year ahead, Giangi Townsend, the food maven behind GiangisKitchen.com, also shared her personal 2019 New Year’s Resolutions that include: finishing her cookbook, publishing at least two new recipes a week, and creating more original content for the website’s global community such as tips, life hacks, step-by-step videos, and more.
