HMP Launches Population Health Learning Network

Platform delivers high-value information in support of high-value health care

MALVERN, Pa. (PRWEB) February 07, 2019 -- As health care payers, providers, and other decision-makers make the shift toward a new standard of care and increasingly work to improve the health outcomes of the populations they serve, HMP, a leading health care event and education company, today announced the launch of its Population Health Learning Network.

The Population Health Learning Network offers news, insight, and education on key issues in population health management. Visitors can create a custom user experience to stay informed about the topics that matter most; receive regular email updates with breaking news and carefully curated content; and connect with a robust community of population health management professionals.

“With the creation of the Population Health Learning Network, HMP is responding to the needs of today’s health care professionals across multiple health care settings by delivering a single, definitive platform that provides information and resources to improve clinical decision-making and ultimately health outcomes,” said David DePinho, senior vice president, and group publisher, multispecialty and managed market groups, HMP. “We believe high-value care begins with high-value information.”

The Population Health Learning Network also integrates content from several long-standing and trusted publications that serve providers and decision-makers across multiple health care settings: Annals of Long-Term Care, First Report Managed Care, Integrated Healthcare Executive, Pharmacy Learning Network, and Veterans Health Today.

In addition to its role as a valuable news source, the Population Health Learning Network serves as the digital home to HMP’s full suite of continuing education programs for pharmacists and managed care professionals, including a series of national meetings organized on behalf of the National Committee for Quality Assurance (NCQA): the Patient-Centered Medical Home (PCMH) Congress and the Health Care Quality Congress.
