A Husband and Wife Team Battle to Hold Onto Their Humanity and Love in a World Challenged by Rising sea Levels and war

Author Ronald A. Williams’ ‘Eurydice’s Song’ intertwines adventure, love and danger

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (PRWEB) February 22, 2019 -- Driven by his curiosity about the human story, particularly with respect to its relationship to gods and humans’ continuous evolution as a species, Ronald A. Williams wrote the “First People’s Saga,” a series of books that explores the journey of humanity from the beginning to the point of where their evolution made them god-like, while exploring the pitfalls of all those changes.

Following the release of “A Voice From The Tomb,” the first book of the series, Williams is back in the literary scene with the second book “Eurydice’s Song” (published by Archway Publishing). The story creates a new world in which adventure, love and danger are intertwined.

Ten years after Andreas is reunited with his wife, a war with his bother-in-law, Natas, is brewing in the land of Tiamat, situated below the ice of Antarctica. In the world above, Natas is also manipulating China and the United States into a deadly conflict. Andreas and his wife Eurydice must fight to save their love, as well as both worlds. To purchase and to know more about the book, interested parties may visit https://www.archwaypublishing.com/Bookstore/BookDetail.aspx?BookId=SKU-001204733.

Blending fantasy with political and human situations, “Eurydice’s Song” offers a contemporary and recognizable set of political circumstances, but they are situated in a very unfamiliar context of gods, unknown and known, potential alien influences masquerading as divinities, all supported by a powerful love story that struggles against all odds.

When asked what he wants readers to take away from the book, Williams says, “Some sense of the complexity of human existence and how the simple things like love and devotion can be a counter to the dangers of our existence. Also, an awareness of the human story as evolving with enormous potential in spite of our fear of the darkness.”

“Eurydice’s Song”
By Ronald A. Williams
Hardcover | 6x9 in | 496 pages | ISBN 9781480872189
Softcover | 6x9 in | 496 pages | ISBN 9781480872172
E-Book | 496 pages | ISBN 9781480872165
Available at Amazon and Barnes & Noble

About the Author
Ronald A. Williams writes a blend of fantasy and political stories, with human situations that are easily recognizable and relatable to readers. He lives in Maryland and Barbados. Williams is also the author of “Four Saints and An Angel,” “A Death In Panama,” “A Voice From The Tomb (Book One of the “First People’s Saga”),” “The Butterflies’ Coat” and “The Dark Land.”
Contact Information
Marketing Services
ArchwayPublishing
http://www.archwaypublishing.com
888-242-5904

Online Web 2.0 Version
You can read the online version of this press release here.