New Personal Memoir Celebrates The Unique Relationship Of Identical Twins

Author Marisol Serrato shares the story of her twin ‘Chita,’ and how she overcame her sudden passing

PERRIS, Calif. (PRWEB) April 29, 2019 -- Losing her twin sister in a sudden and tragic accident inspired Marisol Serrato to write a personal memoir titled “Chita” (published by AuthorHouse). The book is about the lives of the author and her twin sister Chita, and how strong their relationship grew throughout the years.

The memoir is composed of flashbacks and flash-forwards that will take the reader through the journey of two identical twin girls who were inseparable, that is until destiny decided to take their journey into an unexpected course. The inspiration behind this writing is deeply spiritual and moved by a love for a sister. As much as the book is a dedicated memoir, it is also a psychological insight of the unique bond of the identical twin relationship and grief intensity. In addition, the significance of the poetic lines of the book were inspired by the heart of a special human being who was moved by the inspiration of a temporary life. All events and details mentioned in the story are real.

The book is meant to be a companion to those who have lost a loved one or who have experienced a similar tragedy. The story will also serve as a reminder that they are not alone in this path and that others, such as Serrato, have been able to obtain the grace to overcome with faith and hope. “What I would really want readers to take from this writing is simply knowing that Chita existed and that she was a wonderful human being,” says Serrato, adding that, “I would want readers to understand why twin loss though so rare is also a special grief case. Finally, and most importantly, I want readers who have ever lost someone or known someone who has been through similar difficult circumstances, that they can become comforted [and] encouraged that there is hope and that one can find strength in God.”

About the Author
Marisol Serrato was raised in Riverside and Perris, California with divorced parents. She is the third-born out of seven siblings, her twin sister being the fourth-born. She lost her twin sister in a tragic bus accident one month before high school graduation. She affirms that this pain will be with her and her family for the rest of their lives. Attending college was especially emotionally difficult for Serrato. After five long years, she graduated with a Bachelor of Arts in psychology. She did extensive qualitative research on twin loss and sibling loss. She will continue to pursue her career by earning a teaching credential at La Sierra University. She now looks forward to getting married in the spring with her fiancé Jose Sabaj, whom has been a supportive and loving partner. She hopes that by sharing her story, she can reach those who have been through similar experiences.
