Paster Training, Inc. Now Lead Instructors of the FSPCA Intentional Adulteration Conducting Vulnerability Assessments Course

Vice President Melissa Vaccaro and Senior Consultant Barry Parsons are two of the first instructors globally to become Lead Instructors for the Food Safety Preventive Controls Alliance (FSPCA) Intentional Adulteration Conducting Vulnerability Assessments Participant Course.

GILBERTSVILLE, Pa. (PRWEB) May 13, 2019 -- We are thrilled to announce that our Vice President of Consulting, Melissa Vaccaro and Senior Consultant, Barry Parsons have become Lead Instructors for the Food Safety Preventive Controls Alliance (FSPCA) Intentional Adulteration Conducting Vulnerability Assessments (IAVA) Participant Course. They are two of the first instructors to become Lead Instructors for this course.

The Mitigation Strategies to Protect Food Against Intentional Adulteration regulation (referred to as the IA rule) applies to both domestic and foreign companies that are required to register with the FDA as food facilities under the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.

Developed by the FSPCA, this course is the "standardized curriculum" recognized by the FDA. Successful completion of this course is one way to meet the requirements for a "food defense qualified individual" responsible for conducting a vulnerability assessment.

Paster Training will begin offering monthly public courses for the IAVA course starting this month. We will be conducting courses all over the U.S. To see our entire 2019 schedule and register, visit our website PasterTraining.com.
