Three South Florida Law Enforcement Professionals Partner Together to Stop a Determined Hitman in New Novel

Russ Moore releases ‘Death at Buzzards Point: A South Florida Mystery’

BRADENTON, Fla. (PRWEB) May 10, 2019 -- Veteran newspaper and magazine professional Russ Moore enters the world of literary fiction as he releases his first novel, “Death at Buzzards Point: A South Florida Mystery” (published by Archway Publishing). The book is about two deputy sheriffs as they follow the clues to solve the murder of a young woman and one of the town’s leading citizens. While a work of fiction, the book draws on Moore’s experiences and the life and times in South Florida during his early years as a writer and editor in Davie, Florida.

Set in the 1960s as drugs and gambling transform what was once a quiet cattle town into a shooting gallery, the story follows Theo, a seasoned hitman who has become used to lying in silent wait for his next victim. After he murders his latest target and disposes of his body in the Everglades, two young law enforcement officers and a crusty retired sheriff begin investigating. After Sheriff Charlie, a living legend in South Florida, partners with his less experienced counterparts, detectives Dale Norris and Clem Winke, they begin to unravel the motive for the murders of some of the town’s leading citizens. While their investigations take them from the small town of Davie into the dark hole of organized crime plaguing South Florida, Theo falls in love and quietly plans his next murder. Will the sheriff and his counterparts be able to find the killer before he strikes again?

According to Moore, South Florida has had a history of crime and violence. The book tells the story of how the crime wave of South Florida in the early ‘60s begins to move westward to the small town of Davie. Readers will recognize the area and how the crimes touched the lives of ordinary citizens. Ultimately, Moore hopes to provide readers a compelling tale of how small town folks can make a difference when they try.
