Aside from classics like milk tea with boba, Meet Fresh makes its mark on the Asian dessert trend sweeping the U.S. by crafting every dessert with 100% natural ingredients. For instance, the signature Pudding & Q Mochi shaved ice is made with almond and caramel pudding, ice cream, mini taro balls, jelly noodle, Q mochi and condensed milk. Each ingredient comes from certified suppliers who pass the Meet Fresh standard of fresh, natural ingredients.

You won’t find preservatives in any of its 800 international locations, only fresh ingredients like seasonal fruit, elevated by traditional Taiwanese technique. Many of the recipes originated in the childhood kitchen of Brother and Sister Fu. Since then, they’ve evolved their comforting flavors of home into Meet Fresh. By focusing on customer service, quality, and authentic flavors, their recipes are still comforting customers over a decade later.

“When people think about comfort food, they feel warm and imagine hearty foods,” says CEO Mr. Johnson Fu, “we give the same feeling of comfort through sweet, refreshing and cool. Whatever brings you joy.”
After its first U.S. location opened in Irvine, California, the Meet Fresh approach continued to grow to Seattle, Las Vegas, New York and many more locations across the nation. Its southern California roots will grow even stronger as plans for a West LA location near UCLA are in the works.
