GotVMail CTO David Hauser Appointed To Students For The Advancement of Global Entrepreneurship (SAGE) Advisory Board

GotVMail CTO David Hauser appointed to the Global Advisory Board of the Students for the Advancement of Global Entrepreneurship (SAGE).

Weston, MA (PRWEB) November 10, 2005 -- GotVMail Communications®, the professional sound of today’s small business, announced that the Company’s Chief Technology Officer, David Hauser, has been appointed to the Global Advisory Board of the Students for the Advancement of Global Entrepreneurship (SAGE). Hauser, also a co-founder of GotVMail, was recently a judge at the Third Annual SAGE World Cup international competition.

“I am pleased that David Hauser has joined the SAGE Global Advisory Board,” said Dr. Curtis L. DeBerg, SAGE founder and professor at California State University, Chico. “He epitomizes the meaning of ‘social entrepreneur’ -- he seeks profits through his entrepreneurial ventures while simultaneously giving back to the community through his expertise and mentorship. He will be an excellent board member and an exemplary role model for youth around the world.”

“I am very pleased and honored to be a part of SAGE’s Global Advisory Board,” said Hauser. “Part of having a successful business like GotVMail means having the power to affect social change and give back to the community through which you draw your success. SAGE provides young entrepreneurs with a great opportunity to hone their business skills and network with established professionals.”

In addition to serving on the SAGE Global Advisory Board, Hauser is an active member of the Young Entrepreneurs Organization (YEO), and mentors students at Babson College, where he graduated with a degree in Entrepreneurial Studies and garnered several awards including the prestigious “Small Business Initiative Award.”
