

RMC Releases 2008 Project Management Tip-a-Day Desk Calendar

Latest innovation developed by Rita Mulcahy includes daily tips, tricks, advice and encouragements for busy project managers.

Minneapolis, MN (PRWEB) October 23, 2007 -- RMC Project Management, one of the fastest-growing project management training companies in the world, has recently announced the release of Rita Mulcahy's latest product, the 2008 Project Management Tip-a-Day Calendar. This one-of-a-kind product, designed for everyone who manages projects regardless of experience level, is available immediately through the RMC Web site and other online outlets, including Amazon.com. It is expected that the calendar will appeal to a wide audience of project managers, and includes timely and helpful advice on the topics of communication, budgeting, managing risk, planning, building relationships, and more.

Mulcahy, an award-winning project management author and highly visible contributor to the project management profession, was one of the original founders of the project management training industry. Since 1991 her company, RMC Project Management, has delivered classroom training to thousands of project managers around the world. Her book PMP® Exam Prep is among the best-selling project management resources in the world, and has been an Amazon.com Top 500 Best-Seller in 'All Books' for three years running. Since entering the project management training industry, Mulcahy has developed and released nearly fifty (50) professional development products, classes, and e-Learning courses.

The release of the Tip-a-Day Calendar is an indication that RMC understands managing projects can be as fun as it is stressful. "There are so many new books coming out that play on the themes of project dysfunction, chaos, and mistakes," stated Eric Rudolf, Director of Marketing for RMC Project Management. "But we decided to take a more positive approach with this product, and help people improve their project management skills without first announcing that the sky is falling."

In addition to offering individual calendars, RMC has created several unique bundle packs that allow team leaders and personnel managers to acquire calendars in bulk as team rewards, or as holiday gifts for their departments. Rudolf expects the limited run of calendars to move relatively quickly, and points out that orders have already been flooding in. "Of all the products RMC has ever released, the Tip-a-Day Calendar is already the fastest-selling," noted Rudolf. "But this is an extremely unique product, and we expected this would happen. Very few products can claim to improve your project management skills every single day."

Project or personnel managers interested in reserving calendars for themselves or their departments are encouraged to visit the RMC Web site at <http://www.rmcpj.com> for more information.
