Los Angeles, CA (PRWEB) February 05, 2014 -- No sooner off the heels of his recent book tour for "Understanding Organizational Sustainability" and "Power and Influence," had Malawi-based Indigenous Wisdom expert and author, Chiku Malunga, PhD, received the high-level request from the Country’s Anti-Corruption Bureau (ACB) to make a speech presentation at their annual world event – the commemorated National Anti-Corruption Day Conference.

With today’s conference being opened by Malawi President, Dr. Joyce Banda, her appearance will be followed by other speeches and presentations on selected topics to evoke public debate among both attendees and listeners tuning into its global radio broadcast via Zodiak Radio.

This is the ACB’s update to the public on the status quo of their fight against corruption. It is at this prestigious conference, happing today, where the highly sought-after Dr. Malunga will take center stage to deliver his presentation. To entail a topical emphasis as specified by the ACB on, “Integrity and Leadership in the Fight Against Corruption.”

Imagine, bringing African indigenous Wisdom to society and today’s business culture. What Dr. Malunga is foremost recognized for, the world over. To now take his expertise, and on personal invitation from Malawi’s ACB, and to share it before the hundreds of delegates in attendance at the Conference, speaks to a level of intrigue for Dr. Malunga’s special command performance. Particularly in sight of meeting the strategic objectives of this annual event.

Dr. Malunga’s talk at today’s conference is quite sensitive, as most people in attendance will be looking to hear what he has to say. Given his world-recognized expertise and background in civil society, leadership development, and strategy from an African perspective, it’s not hard to understand his notoriety and perpetual command requests.

Today’s speech focus includes:

1. The meaning of Leadership, not just as leaders, but a matured and responsible relationship between leaders and followers.

Listeners will be further provided with a contribution platform through sms’s and different social media such as Facebook and Twitter through which they shall make their views known on the issues to be raised.

Dr. Malunga continues to be in demand, and just previously, he had conducted a seminar in Ghana for the world distinguished organization, AFRICA LEAD. This request for him to speak evolved from their keen interest to learn how to apply African Indigenous Wisdom to their leadership development work. His invited participation with AFRICA LEAD further validates the significance of his Indigenous Wisdom-based message for an organization’s development and continued growth. A unique proficiency and world class innovation as further supported through his books, Understanding Organizational Sustainability through African Proverbs and Power and Influence: Self-Development Lessons from African Proverbs and Folktales, among other books. The collective information he offers between these titles places an emphasis on the African expression, UBUNTU (the essence of being human).

Dr. Malunga will also be featured in the next issue of Unity First/Forbes Diversity News.

A sought-after pioneer and a thought leader, he has successfully introduced the value of indigenous proverbial principles to the business class, as well as for achieving personal growth and development.

African proverbs are used to illustrate ideas, reinforce arguments and deliver messages of inspiration, consolation, celebration and advice. They are an integral part of African culture, in wide use today and very much part of everyday speech.

African Proverb:
“It is not money that builds a house. It is wisdom.”

With the Malawian community still reeling from the Cashgate blow, and in the midst of a recent visit made by Liberian President, Ellen Johnson Sirleaf, to participate in a press conference with Banda, Sirleaf’s visit to Malawi was perceived as in line with African solidarity. In one social commentary posted with an article which announced Sirleaf’s arrival to Malawi, it stated... "Welcome to Malawi, Madam President. The country you have landed your feet has never experienced civil wars as is the case with your country. One thing you will learn from us is that we are not war loving people. Secondly, this is your last term in office. Learn from the host matrix of Cashgate lest you leave the office poorer. Enjoy the warm heart of Malawi, the Cashgate country." (Malawi Voice).

According to a recent report in Malawi Democrat, “Over K90 billion that is believed to have been siphoned off from treasury over the past two months…”

Dr. Malunga is also the author behind an earlier release, Oblivion or Utopia: the Prospects for Africa, which explains most of the problems on the continent stem from the fact that, although the continent may be politically independent, it is not economically independent. Efforts to reverse the continent's continuing underdevelopment have failed to-date, including trillions of dollars in aid, because they have not been consciously aimed at enabling Africa to turn its vast natural resources into wealth. The only known way of ensuring economic independence.

Of further relative interest, Dr. Malunga can be seen making an earlier appearance as part of an interview broadcast:
