“Psychotherapy and the Brain: Clinical Biopsychology” Upcoming Workshop by Dr. Robert Moss Announced by the Center for Emotional Restructuring LLC

A continuing education workshop on brain based psychotherapy integration is scheduled at the international meeting of the Christian Association for Psychological Studies in Atlanta on April 4, 2014.

Greenville, SC (PRWEB) March 31, 2014 -- Dr. Robert A. Moss will conduct an hour presentation on the cortical column brain code model and how this relates to psychological problems and treatment. This will include information on how disruption of column formation may be a common denominator in schizophrenia, autism, and Alzheimer’s disease. There will be an explanation on how depression and anxiety disorders develop based on the model, and ways to approach treatment.

Dr. Moss has published a number of articles on the Clinical Biopsychological Model and its foundational Dimensional Systems Model in the past 16 months. He is actively involved in promoting this approach. There is an article on the Emotional Restructuring treatment session that will appear in the Neuropsychotherapist magazine in the April issue. This will provide a detailed discussion of how the brain is thought to be affected by each step in this treatment procedure designed to neutralize the impact of negative emotional memories.

References for all the articles on this new approach (available at the Emotional Restructuring website, as well as at researchgate.net and academia.edu on Dr. Moss’ contribution page) are as follows:

Dr. Moss is board certified in clinical psychology through the American Board of Professional Psychology and neuropsychology through the American Board of Professional Neuropsychology. He is the founding editor-in-chief for AIMS Neuroscience which is a theoretical journal scheduled to begin publishing in May. He has authored 48 professional articles and presented at numerous regional, national, and international conferences. He is currently employed at Bon Secours St. Francis Hospital in Greenville, SC.
Contact Information
Robert Moss
Center for Emotional Restructuring
http://www.emotionalrestructuring.com
+1 (417) 761-4579

Online Web 2.0 Version
You can read the online version of this press release here.