Self Made Season 2 to Premiere on Amazon Prime With Albright as Host

Andy Albright is on the hunt to find people just like him with big dreams and ambition all around the country in the new season of “Self Made,” when the series premieres on Oct. 22 on Amazon Prime.

BURLINGTON, N.C (PRWEB) October 19, 2018 -- The United States is filled with people who have big dreams, big ideas and a healthy entrepreneurial spirit.

Andy Albright is one of those people, and he’s on the hunt to find people just like him around the country in the new season of “Self Made,” when the series premieres on Oct. 22 on Amazon Prime.

Albright, an author, speaker and the President and CEO of National Agents Alliance (aka The Alliance), will take viewers around the country searching high and low to find entrepreneurs that have taken business ideas, acted boldly and put their plan in motion to find the freedom to do what they love to make a living. Albright flies around the country, searching for people who are truly living the “American Dream.”

Season 2 of “Self Made” is 10 episodes and will air each Monday. Each episode profiles four different personalities sharing their success stories, and documents Albright in places like Las Vegas, Nevada; Miami, Fla.; Chicago, Ill.; Raleigh, N.C.; Portland, Ore. and beyond.

Viewers can watch “Self Made” on Amazon Prime by searching “Self Made.”

The show is being produced by Hotseat Media, which has produced branded TV content and sponsored series for Chevrolet, Boston Scientific, and the Spartan Race series. “Self Made,” is an episodic TV series about entrepreneurs, is entering its second season with The Alliance as the presenting sponsor.

When approached with the idea of hosting the show, Albright jumped at the opportunity.

“The concept of the show is right in line with the way I see entrepreneurship and having the freedom to do what you love for a living,” Albright said. “I love seeing people be able to spend their time, energy and effort doing what they love and have a true passion for.”

Chad Harris, producer of “Self Made,” said having The Alliance as the season sponsor and Albright as its host was a perfect match for what the show is about.

“When you create sponsored TV content, money is only half the solution,” Harris said. “If you can get a partner that also has the same goal in mind to expand the show way beyond its current audience, that is a real winner. The Alliance fit our plan perfectly. Andy Albright has the same passion we do to create the best series possible about ‘Self Made’ people. Having Andy as the host adds a new dynamic, as he connects those stories to the audience.”

Albright said the buzz surrounding the show has been extremely positive, and he looks forward to seeing the response he gets as each episode airs.

“We are ready to roll it out,” Albright said. “The show will give you ideas, and it will certainly provide you with inspiration to make things happen. It will help you stick to what you are doing and follow through. We can’t wait to see it.”

Viewers will be introduced to people from various backgrounds in a wide range of businesses. The show is being shot in various cities around the U.S. with Albright hosting each episode.

“I’m so excited about filming ‘Self Made’ with Hotseat Media and Chad Harris,” Albright said. “It’s about people doing crazy, big things. It’s about kicking butt, grit, sticking to it and making it in America today. It’s going to be crazy. People that know me know that I am passionate about entrepreneurism. It’s about people making it big. We live in the land of opportunity, and we are traveling around the country looking for people that have done something special. We want to give them due recognition and give them just promotion.”
