Countdown to the 2019 iaedp™ Symposium: Top 10 Reasons to Attend This Year’s Eating Disorders Conference

With two weeks until the start of the 33rd annual iaedp™ Symposium, scheduled for February 7-10, attendees have at least 10 beneficial reasons to attend this year’s eating disorders conference with nearly 60 presentations, workshops and special events and keynote speakers who are some of the country’s leading professionals in the field of eating disorders.

Pekin, IL (PRWEB) January 27, 2019 -- With two weeks until the start of the 33rd annual iaedp™ Symposium, scheduled for February 7-10, attendees have at least 10 beneficial reasons to attend this year’s eating disorders conference with nearly 60 presentations, workshops and special events and keynote speakers who are some of the country’s leading professionals in the field of eating disorders.

1. Be part of a national networking event. Whether it’s during panel discussions or in lobby conversations, there’s an opportunity to meet hundreds of people who are professionals in the field of eating disorders.

2. Plan ahead to maximize time and experience with the iaedp™ mobile application, a free interactive tool that makes it easy for attendees to plan and participate in the 2019 iaedp™ Symposium.

3. Experience the keynote speakers, some of the most noted professionals in the field of eating disorders. Their presentations will offer insight into some of the most innovative research in the field.

4. See the five finalists in the 9th annual “Imagine Me Beyond What You See” body image mannequin art competition. The five finalists will be showcased and the winner revealed during this year’s iaedp™ Symposium.

5. Participate in core courses that begin just before the iaedp™ Symposium program. For experienced eating disorders professionals who qualify, this program is a pathway to the certification process.

6. Take advantage of the preconference trainings that address the clinical complexity of eating disorders.

7. Learn about MemberSHARE. As a way to further its mission at the grassroots level, the iaedp™ Foundation has launched MemberSHARE, an online peer community solely dedicated to fostering an environment to support its professional members.

8. Participate in eight key presentations in Spanish. Many international members prefer the Spanish presentations, and many members are bilingual to better serve their patients. Previous years’ Spanish-only presentations at the iaedp™ Symposium have been popular, and the series continues in 2019. (A special note is that there will be a Spanish translator live during the Core Courses and Keynote sessions.)

9. Experience the iaedp™ tradition with the ceremonial Presentation of the Colors, including the iaedp™ Chapter State Flags and International Flags, honoring the professionals who come together each year to advance learning in eating disorders.

Relax in the desert climate of Palm Desert, California, which offers warm temperatures and an environment with a diversity of entertainment options.

Registration information, the 2019 program schedule and specific information about each presentation and all presenters at the 2019 iaedp™ Symposium can be found at www.iaedp.com.
