Marie Penn’s Newly Released “L-A-S-T” is a Devastating Memoir of Loss, Helplessness, Mental Illness, and Greed

“L-A-S-T” from Christian Faith Publishing author Marie Penn is the gripping true story of the author’s experiences battling her own antagonistic tendencies, the shock of her husband’s suicide, as well as the fresh hell of social and legal parasites who entered her life in the wake of her husband’s death with an eye on the fortune he left behind.

MEADVILLE, Pa. (PRWEB) February 07, 2019 -- “L-A-S-T”: a painful autobiography of a shattered family, is the creation of published author Marie Penn, a widowed mother born in Pennsylvania with a story to tell.

Penn writes, “After John died, the onslaught of greedy, vulturous lawyers and in-laws and many other outsiders entered my children's and my life with no remorse of right or wrong with his estate issues. The lawyers, the in-laws, and the many other parasites who took advantage of my children's and my rights made sure they all cashed in first before my children and I were even considered. My children and I were last – when all others were first. As I lived through another six or so years into more unconscionable poverty…‘But many that are first shall be last: and the last first...”

Published by Christian Faith Publishing, Marie Penn’s new book is a harrowing but ultimately triumphant account of how decades of discord finally ended in victory and unity as a family.

Penn talks openly about depression, obsessive-compulsive disorder, antagonistic tendencies, and other dark conditions of humanity that have helped shape her life for the worse, but which have taught her in the process how to remain undefeated by the enemies on the doorstep as well as those within one’s own mind.
