Author E. Asamoah-Yaw Reinvents Readers’ Biblical Understanding

Provocative new book questions religious faith and shares self-liberating insights

Kumasi, Ghana (PRWEB) February 21, 2012 -- A Biography of the Biblical God is an insightful and thought-provoking analysis of religion and faith. In this compelling and stimulating read, one will discover a myriad of well-supported facts and references which question the validity of Biblical claims and explanations. Written by E. Asamoah-Yaw, the provocative pages of this book reveal the Bible’s lack of verisimilitude with scientific, as well as the common laws of nature.

A groundbreaking expose on the humanity of Jesus Christ, his intimate marital and sexual relations with Mary Magdalene, historical inconsistencies of the Catholic Church, the inaccuracies of the Book of Genesis explaining the beginning of creation, the holes in the four Gospels of the New Testament and many more are all discussed in this analytical book. This creative and compelling page-turner will no doubt strike intellectuals and insinuate a sense of curiosity within an individual. A book that will surely appeal to those who possess an independent mind and a logical sense of reasoning, A Biography of the Biblical God will stimulate a wide avenue for discussion, serving as a catalyst for one’s personal reflection on the things previously assumed and accepted to be true.

Furthermore, this read sends an eye-opening message to its readers. Mr. Asamoah-Yaw explains that faith in anything outside the self is demonstrably not dependable, not predictable and in fact very counter-productive. Religious faith may temporarily increase people’s comfort levels, but it freezes the knowledge of the self and therefore prevents humans to face head-on challenges of the practical world. For the author, faith outside the self encourages total self-submission and hinders one from discovering one’s innate powers.

This book will be featured at the 2012 Michigan Reading Association in Grand Rapids, MI, on March 9-11, 2012.

About the Author
E. Asamoah-Yaw was born on the 15th. March 1942, this is according to his mother and his own calculations since he doesn’t have an authentic birth certificate. His father died when he was about five years old. He was nurtured by two distinct religious families: one was traditional religious faith, and the other was Christian. In early 1965, he succeeded in migrating to the UK to further his education. By August 1975, Yaw had earned a Bachelors Degree of Science in Economics in the University of London. In 1980 he migrated to the U.S. to pursue a career in the finance industry. By the age of 40, his interest in religion or divinity had settled on research with the hope of understanding the true significance God, particularly the one exhibited in the Holy Bible. It became an obsession that anything about the biblical God and its related stories from every source had to be critically diagnosed and written down as his source reference for a future book. Mr. Asamoah-Yaw retired as an Administrator in 2004. He has 4 children and 4 grandchildren. He is currently living with his wife Juliana in Ghana.
