Recovery Time with New Prostate Therapy Depends on How Long Chronic Prostatitis and CPPS Has Lasted States Fine Treatment

Fine Treatment shares testimonials confirming the effectiveness of new therapy for chronic prostatitis and chronic pelvic pain syndrome (CPPS). However, the patients with chronic prostatitis who have been suffering from this disorder for a long time should expect to take more time to recover.

London, UK (PRWEB) March 18, 2012 -- Fine Treatment presents testimonials of new Thermobalancing Therapy treating chronic prostatitis/chronic pelvic pain syndrome effectively and suggests that the recovery time depends on the lasting of the prostate conditions. Two testimonials shared below show that the time of recovery often depends on how long a man has chronic prostatitis.

According to the National Institute of Health (NIH), “Chronic nonbacterial prostatitis is a condition that causes long-term pain and urinary symptoms. It involves the prostate gland or other parts of a man's lower urinary tract or genitai area. Treatment for nonbacterial prostatitis is difficult.”

Contrary to many fruitless treatments and medications used for chronic prostatitis/CPPS, the Thermobalancing Therapy improves condition of a prostate gland and eases the symptoms of this disorder gradually, http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=q48bbQJQsdE.

The first testimonial has covered 5-months from November 2011 to March 2012. A user of Dr. Allen’s device, Sampath explains: “I am 50, very active and have always enjoyed my good life. The prostatitis hit me 4 years ago and has troubled me a lot despite the fact that I have taken all sorts of treatments. The most unpleasant symptoms were frequency of urination, burning sensation with discomfort while passing urine and the disgusting erectile dysfunction followed. After 3-months of using Dr. Allen’s device most of the symptoms reduced about 90% but still I had on and off burning sensation passing urine and erection did not improve very much. After 2 more month most of my prostate problem has been solved with moderate erection improvement.”

The second testimonial has covered 6-months from June 2011 to January 2012. A user of Dr. Allen’s device, Nicky tells: “I am 58, dynamic as like to walk, run, or swim almost every day. Symptoms of prostatitis started when I was in my early 20s. With years the symptoms worsened from frequency of urination to irritation in the head of the penis and pain in rectum, especially after long periods of sitting. After 6-months of using Dr. Allen’s device frequency of urination has reduced dramatically but still I have pain in rectum.”

“The testimonials above show that the length of time it takes to recover from chronic prostatitis varies depending on how long a man has this problem,” says Dr. Allen. “The Thermobalancing Therapy reduces the symptoms of chronic prostatitis dramatically protecting men from potentially harmful prostate treatment options.”
