Cost-Effective Kidney Stones Dissolving and Prostate Enlargement Reversing Therapy on CNBC Featuring in Award Winning Health TV Show, Highlights Fine Treatment

Broadcast on CNBC news about natural therapy dissolving kidney stones and terminating prostate enlargement was discussed by Ariana Adjani and Dr. Simon Allen on August 22, 2012 reports Fine Treatment. Contrary to risky and expensive ways of breaking kidney stones into smaller pieces with ESWL or removing parts of prostate by surgical procedures, Dr Allen's devices provide an effective and harmless therapy with the natural thermo-element placed in close proximity to impaired organs.

London, UK (PRWEB) August 24, 2012 -- Broadcast on CNBC, a stimulating discussion about new Dr. Allen’s devices for the treatment of lasting medical conditions highlighted not only their phenomenal performance but also high cost-effectiveness as they enable the users to treat themselves at home without expensive equipments and consultation fees, Fine Treatment reveals. Furthermore, by improving blood circulation in organs locally, these devices dissolve kidney stones and terminate benign prostatic hyperplasia (BPH) naturally. 21st Century Health, an award winning TV series, invited Dr Simon Allen and Ariana Adjani to share exciting news on the natural Thermobalancing Therapy successful in treating various chronic diseases, which is highly important for viewers internationally.

Specifically, Dr Allen’s Device for Prostate Care works well in cases of BPH and chronic prostatitits. It causes no side effects, and allows its users to maintain their life style. On the other side, Men’s-Health forum on Retrograde Ejaculation after Prostate Surgery shares views of men on conventional treatment options. For instance, posted by Raja on 29 December 2011, his message says, “I was misled by my doctor in 2009. Expected one thing and was incontinent for 2 years after TURP. No warning from the doctor. No preparation. Impotency at times followed a few months after the surgery. No more ejaculation.” Another post on 2 October 2011 states, “I'm 44 male, 8 months ago I had Holap operation for BPH and still now I'm living a nightmare. Do not touch your prostate. The annoying symptoms you have now are nothing compared to what you have after surgery.”

Regarding kidney stones, the most commonly used "tool" for kidney stone removal is extracorporeal shock wave lithotripsy (SWL) which, according to the Mayo Clinic, uses sound waves to create strong vibrations (shock waves) that break the stones into tiny pieces to be passed with urine. SWL can cause blood in the urine, bruising on the back or abdomens, bleeding around the kidney and other adjacent organs, and pain as the stone fragments pass through the urinary tract. Besides, this procedure is not suitable for all cases of kidney stones and does not guarantee them not coming back.

Dr Allen's Device for Kidney Care, on the other hand, dissolves all types and sizes of kidney stones gradually but steadily, and causes none of the side effects listed above.

“It doesn’t make sense to treat BPH with TURP and eliminate kidney stones with ESWL, as after these procedures you can find yourself having more health problems than previously,” says Dr. Allen. “Dr Allen's Devices are able to dissolve all types and sizes of kidney stones gently and reverse BPH naturally.”
